

Password & Account Log

A paper index of the accounts you own — hints and recovery details, not passwords.

Read this before you write anything.

Do not write full passwords on paper that lives on your desk. Use this page as an index: which accounts exist, which email they are tied to, whether two-factor is on, and a hint only you would understand. Keep it somewhere private — a locked drawer or a safe — and use a password manager for the actual credentials.

Review this page whenever you change your main email or phone number. A recovery route that points at a dead address is worse than none.
